Dynamic susceptibility contrast magnetic resonance (DSC-MR) is a T2-weighted diffusion-weighted imaging (DWI) technique. It has been proved that the main reason of cerebral infarction in malignant gliomas is increased microvascular permeability to contrast material. The purpose of this study was to compare the histopathologic findings between malignant gliomas showing enhancement on contrast-enhanced DSC-MR and those without enhancement. We studied 18 malignant gliomas from 15 patients in which postcontrast enhancement on contrast-enhanced DSC-MR was identified. The tumor specimens were examined under a light microscope, and histopathologic findings were compared with those of 12 cases that showed no postcontrast enhancement. The histopathologic findings were classified into three groups based on the results of immunostaining for glial fibrillary acidic protein (GFAP): grade 0, abnormal astrocytic processes only; grade 1, abnormal astrocytic processes associated with multiple foci of atypia; grade 2, diffuse atypia. In the non-enhancing group, three patients showed grade 2 tumors, and in the enhancing group, one patient showed grade 2 and 11 patients showed grade 3. Malignant gliomas showing enhancement on contrast-enhanced DSC-MR corresponded histopathologically to grade 3 tumors.Triathlon Training Program I'm a member of the Lawrence Triathlon Club, and they're putting together
